Alice cried and cried, and her tears made a deep pool around her.

After a few minutes, she heard footsteps, and saw the white rabbit. He had a fan and a pair of white gloves. He looked worried, and he did not see Alice.

"Oh, the Duchess is going to be angry! I'm so late!" said the rabbit.

"Excuse me --" said Alice.

The rabbit turned round and saw Alice. He screamed, dropped the fan and the gloves, and ran away.

Alice picked up the fan and the gloves, and said, "Oh dear! Everything is so strange today!"

Suddenly, she saw that she was quite small again. "The fan is making me small!" she said and dropped it on the floor. "Now I can go through the door!"

She ran to the door, but it was shut, and the key was on the table again. Alice tried to climb up the table, but she fell and landed in a pool of water.

"What's this?" said Alice. "Am I in the sea?"

But it wasn't the sea. "It's the tears I cried when I was big!" said Alice. "Oh, why did I cry so much?"

Just then, Alice saw that she was not alone in the pool. There was a mouse, a duck, a dodo, a young eagle, and many other strange creatures. Alice and the animals started to swim, and they soon got to the shore of the pool of tears.

1 Let's Warm Up with Some Lead-in Activities!

👁 View options

1 Show students a series of images depicting different animals and characters, including a rabbit, a mouse, and a duck. In small groups, have them discuss what kind of personality traits these animals might represent based on common folklore or literature. After a few minutes, ask each group to share their ideas with the class.

2 Provide students with a list of phrases that could describe emotions (e.g., "feeling small", "lost", "confused", "curious"). Ask them to work alone or in pairs to create a short dialogue or scene that could involve one or more of these emotions. Afterward, have a few students present their dialogues to the class.

3 Give students a vocabulary matching activity consisting of key words from the text (e.g., "rabbit", "gloves", "tears", "shore"). Ask them to work in pairs to match the words with their meanings or synonyms. After completing the match, they should each choose one word and use it in a new sentence related to experiences they've had with unexpected situations.

In today's world of high-tech gadgets, it is easy to become distracted from maintaining a balanced diet. However, healthy eating does not have to be complicated. Focusing on fresh produce is a great start. Many fruits and vegetables are shipped from all over the world, allowing us access to a variety of options year-round. Eating them in their natural form ensures that their nutrients remain intact.

Some people believe that the convenience of processed foods implies they are inherently easier to prepare or healthier, but this is not always the case. By dedicating a little time each day to preparing meals with genuine ingredients, you can enjoy the benefits of a wholesome diet.
